THIS WEEK'S LATEST BEAUTY NEWS...

OUCH!

An Argentinian 'doctor' has come under the hammer for injecting his patients with a non-approved, low-grade silicon – similar to that used to grease car parts! – leaving them with paralysis and 'holes' in their faces. Priscilla Presley, who's undergoing corrective surgery, is among those to have been caught up in the scandal, in which the unlicensed Dr Daniel Serrano jabbed Hollywood's A-list with the toxic lubricant. This begs the question: how do you know if a cosmetic doctor is the real deal? Sydney-based Dr Mark Kohout says, 'Do your research. The Australian Society of Plastic Surgeons website has information about correct protocol and provides details of registered plastic surgeons in Australia.' Check it out at www.plasticsurgery.org.au.

HEY, JUDE

With most of Hollywood's ladies spoken for, cosmetic companies are clamouring for hot male talent to help sell their products. Givenchy's got Justin Timberlake, Lancôme's snatched Clive Owen and now Dior has signed Jude Law. The house of luxe plans to use Jude's good looks to promote their male scent, slated to launch in time for Father's Day this year. Details of the juice are under wraps but if the stylish star has anything to do with it, it's going to be hot!

When Michael Jackson sang, 'It don't matter if you're black or white', he clearly wasn't talking about foundation! Darker-skinned lasses like Rihanna must take a very different approach to their fair-skinned sisters.

How to...

- 1 PROTECT Just because you're not fair skinned, doesn't mean you won't burn. Apply an SPF sunscreen (1) every day.
- 2 COVER Darker skin won't always have warm (golden or peachy) undertones – it can be cool-toned (pink or rosy) – so get your foundation professionally matched. L'Oréal does great shades for deep skin (2).
- 3 TREAT Skin like Rihanna's can be oily, so go for mineral make-up (3) – it won't clog your pores. Treat pesky pimples with care as dark skin scars badly. Cover with kindness (4).
